Government of Baton Rouge in West Florida.
SYNDICATE OF MONTESANO.

Before me the Syndic of Montesano, in presence of the underwritten witnesses, personally appeared David Williams, carpenter and sawyer, who having been duly sworn to declare the truth and nothing but the truth, says he was near the mouth of the Bayou Sarah, in the division of Feliciana, belonging to his Most Catholic Majesty, on Friday the 15th of this present month—and on that forenoon, he, this appearer, was present, and did see a party of armed men, in service of the U. States of America, in military array, with their arms, in and on the territory belonging to the king—that this appearer declared as truth, upon his solemn oath, that the said party or detachment landed above the mouth of the Bayou Sarah, from a boat or barge coming from New Orleans with the hospital stores, as was reported, and that the said party did march down on the Spanish side of the Mississippi by land to the mouth of the Bayou Sarah, which they crossed, and was so seen to do by this appearer—that, meeting with a man named Landon Carter, following generally the business of saving timber and carpenter's work, they seized the said Landon Carter by violence and force of arms, and made him a prisoner. After which, proceeding forward, near the bank of the river Mississippi, in the Spanish territory with their arms in military array, they attempted to seize another man of the name of Sampson, who took refuge in a house inhabited, as the appearer believes, by one Tayntor and one Gehis, who had been occupied in preparing tobacco, and the armed party of soldiers having followed him into the house, did there seize him and make him also a prisoner, to the great alarm and terror of the inhabitants, peaceable subjects of his most Catholic Majesty, who were unprepared to repel this unexpected and hostile attack. This appearer declares that Mr. James Willet, owner of several houses in or near the spot where these outrages were committed, and several other persons were present and saw these facts as well as this appearer, who declares the same to be strictly true, and this appearer being questioned with respect to the name of the commanding officer of the boat out of which this detachment landed, says he understands the boat left New Orleans under the command of Lieutenant Pemberton, who he was told had before that time left the command to a Sergeant Graycraft, and returned himself to New Orleans, and that as the party of armed men carried off the two prisoners they had made, he verily believes they were taken out of his majesty's dominions, and forcibly put on board the said boat by the said military force of the United States of America.

Thus done at the Syndic's Office, in Montesano, this 25th day of July, 1808, in the afternoon, in the presence of Robert Jones, Esq. inhabitant and planter in this Syndicate, and Mr. Samuel Briggs, inhabitant of this place.

Montesano, the said day and year.

WM. HERRIES, Syndic.

[The above is accompanied by a deposition of Charles Mac Guich, which being nearly a repetition of the above, is omitted. It is attested by Rob. Jones and Sam. Briggs.]

REPORT made to his excellency the gov. civil and military of the fort and jurisdiction of Baton Rouge, in West-Florida, by the undersigned, relative to the mission with which he was charged by his said excellency.

WM. HICKY, an inhabitant of this jurisdiction, Syndic, captain of cavalry, and Samuel Fulton, formerly a colonel, an inhabitant of this colony, and discharging the functions of major of militia, of this jurisdiction, having been charged by his excellency the governor to go on board the gun-boat of the U. States of America, stationed near the mouth of the bayou or river Iberville, for the purpose of claiming, on behalf of his said excellency, a man named Armstrong, who had been living in this country for several months, and had been forcibly taken from the house of Mr. Soulliac Guidry, an inhabitant of this jurisdiction, by the captain or commanding officer of said gun-boat, aided and assisted by an armed detachment of soldiers, or marines, in the service of the U. States; this day went on board the gun-boat No. 21, commanded by Mr. John Owens, where we were received by the said commanding officer; and having requested to speak to him in private, we represented to him the motive of our visit, and demanded of him the said prisoner Armstrong, as having been illegally carried off by force and violence, contrary to the LAW OF NATIONS, from the territory of his majesty, and to the great terror of the inhabitants of the house in which the said Armstrong had been seized, his majesty's peaceful subjects, who could not oppose such violence, though committed in open day.

Whereupon the said commanding officer of gun-boat No. 21, made answer to us, that he neither could, nor would, restore the said prisoner without orders from his commodore; we observed to him that doubtless he would receive such orders; and he assured us that he would write by the mail that was to pass the same day, adding, that if he received orders to restore the prisoner, his superior officer might come and take the command of gun-boat No. 21, himself, for as to his part, he would not command her a day longer.

We represented to the said commanding officer how reprehensible was his conduct in making an armed descent, in military array, on the territory of a neighboring nation in amity and in peace with the United States—there to make prisoners by force.—To this he answered, that he thinks he had a right to take deserters wherever he finds them.

After some discussion and reasoning on our part, to convince him that he was in the wrong, we retired.

And we consider it our duty to make, without delay, this report to his excellency the governor of Baton Rouge, this 22d day of July, 1808.

(Signed)

PHILIP HICKY, SAMUEL FULTON.

FOREIGN.

From Irish and English papers received at the office of the Mercantile Advertiser by the ship Elizabeth.

LONDON, August 2.

We are happy to state that the expedition has at length sailed from St. Helens, under convoy of the Audacious. The transports amounted to about 170, and contain a force of 15,000 troops. They will be joined off Plymouth by general Anstruther's division.

Intelligence of a most pleasing description has been received from Portugal; and the general affairs of that country bears an aspect not less auspicious than those of Spain. The brave people who have already repaired to the patriotic standard on the north side of the Tagus, are in number upwards of 35,000, including 7000 of the old regular troops, 10,000 of the old militia, 5000 mounted cavalry, and 10,000 dismounted. The expedition under Sir Arthur Wellesley has long ere this arrived; and by its means the whole of the patriotic force will speedily be armed and duly appointed for the field.—Eager for combat, 18,000 of these brave fellows have already advanced beyond Coimbra. It should seem as if Junot was uncertain what steps to take after the check which general Loison had experienced.

The latter officer, however, had detached a part of his force to join another corps under general Laborde, which Junot had sent from Lisbon to Santarém, and who had advanced beyond this place to Leira, with a view as was supposed to give battle to the patriots. It is evident from these movements, that the enemy were desirous of bringing the patriots to action before the arrival of our troops—but from the prudence hitherto displayed by the latter, there is reason to hope that they will avoid any thing like a general action till the arrival of Sir Arthur Wellesley. When that gallant officer arrived at Coruna, he dispatched a messenger to the patriotic army, to announce his approach in aid of their operations.

The letters from St. Andero, dated the 24th instant, all concur in saying, that the French were undoubtedly defeated by Cuesta—that the patriots were in the highest spirits, and that they expected the most favorable result from the effort that was to be made the next day by all the armies.

It is reported on the authority of a letter from Heligoland, that the Spanish troops in the island of Fuen, having received full information of the state of their country, have refused to obey the orders of Bernadotte, and are in a complete state of mutiny.

Their Prussian majesties, alarmed, it is said, at some movements of the French troops on the Vistula, have, we understand, moved from Koningsberg to Memel.

The report is revived, that the duke of York is appointed to the chief command of the expeditions destined for Spain and Portugal; with the addition that the duke of Cambridge is to accompany his royal brother.

The contents of the foreign papers under the influence of the French, now relate chiefly to the progress of Joseph Bonaparte in Spain, preserving a studied silence upon the internal state of that country. Pursuing their usual system of deception, the enemy would make us believe, that never a king was received on his accession with more joy and welcome. Joseph has a large retinue of Frenchmen, and of those traitors who betrayed their country at Bayonne. These make a display of loyalty in the different towns—they huzza themselves—they make speeches to the new king full of affection to his person, and of praises of the mildness of his government—and then they tell us of the general enthusiasm with which the people received them.

August 3.

We received this morning private letters and papers from Oporto the 29th ult.

Sir Arthur Wellesley and the expedition were off Oporto on the 24th—he landed and paid his respects to the bishop—after which he re-embarked in the morning of the 25th. As the wind blew strong from the northward all that day, the fleet was soon out of sight, and it was expected they would be before Figueira on the morning of the 26th. Sir Arthur was himself to proceed first to the Tagus in the Crocodile, and then return to Figueira. There is the best reason to believe that the patriots will not be attacked by Loison or Laborde, before the landing of our troops. Portuguese regiments were marching daily from the north of Portugal towards Lisbon. Confident expectations are entertained of the capture of Junot and his army: and nothing, say our letters, could equal the joy and gratitude of the Portuguese, when they saw our fleet of transports arrive off the coast and knew them to be destined to assist in rescuing them from the tyranny of France.

Sir Thomas Dyer arrived in town yesterday evening, and immediately had a conference with his majesty's ministers. He had an astonishingly quick passage from the coast of Spain.

There has been no second battle between Cuesta and the French: nothing beyond affairs with outposts. Sir Thomas says, he was present in the memorable battle of Cuesta, and he speaks with the highest applause of the impetuosity of the Spanish attack. Though undisciplined and irregular, their fury was irresistible. He saw four French regiments literally mowed down; but at the same time the fire of the French, their order and quickness, were most effectual, and the havoc was dreadful.

A Gottenburgh mail arrived last night.—Since the glorious burst of patriotism in Spain the war in Finland has ceased to occupy much of the public attention. The Swedes have of late not been successful against the Russians; they have been forced to fall back from some of the positions which they had occupied. But the capture of a very large Russian convoy of provisions will be severely felt by the enemy, who are in want of all kinds of provisions, that they cannot for some time attempt any operation of magnitude.

Dutch papers have been received of the 29th ultimo, they contain Paris news of the 18th, which informs us that private letters from Madrid mention the complete re-establishment of tranquility in that city, and that the new monarch was impatiently expected. Upon the internal state of Spain the most profound silence is still preserved.

The kingdom of Naples is destined for Murat—his successor in the dukedom of Berg is not mentioned.

All idea of evacuating the Prussian provinces seems to have been abandoned.

Tuscany is to be united to France, and a proclamation has been published, congratulating the people upon the honor of being adopted into the Great Family.

Yesterday afternoon a cabinet council was held at the foreign office.

The Portuguese envoys who have been for some time expected, have at length arrived by the Plover. The one is M. Ferrao, whom we mentioned some time since, and the other the viscount Belsamao, the son of chevalier Pinto, who was so long the Portuguese ambassador in this country.

A whole company of the police cavalry from Lisbon deserted, and are arrived at Coimbra, and brought with them many French officers, whom they picked up on the road.

On the 12th July 350 marines were landed from the Alfred at Figueira, the place where it is supposed Sir Arthur Wellesley's expedition has disembarked.

A letter from Petersburg dated July 2d, says "that count Meerfeldt, the Austrian ambassador at that court, had taken his audience of leave, and was on the eve of departing for Vienna." In another letter from the same place, the following observation is made—"all the reports respecting a Spanish peace appear to be entirely groundless."

The refractory spirit among the conspirators on the right bank of the Rhine is not yet subdued. Several skirmishes between them and the French troops have lately taken place.

A new and unexpected change has again taken place with respect to the American vessels in French and Dutch ports. Letters had been received from Holland, stating that a new embargo was laid on the American ships that had touched at English ports, and that the most rigid proceedings were expected to take place against them. This new resolution came from Bonaparte himself at Bayonne.

The vessels that were warned off from the Prussian ports, have since delivered their cargoes in Russia, with the exception of British manufactures, which are still prohibited.

The new organization of the Austrian armies is said to have produced some very sharp remonstrances from the French minister at the court of Vienna. He is said to have declared that it could only have been adopted in contemplation of a rupture with France, and that a perseverance in it would be considered as an indication of such a hostile disposition on the part of Austria as would justify France in assuming that military attitude which the protection of her allies and the maintenance of her power required. His Prussian majesty is putting Memel and Koningsberg into the best state of defence that his scanty means will afford.

FRENCH OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

MADRID, June 15.

The following intelligence is published by our government:

"General Dupont who commands a corps of the French army, while passing through Andujar on the 24th of May, received information that the enemy of Spain and France had succeeded in misleading a part of the inhabitants of Lower Andalusia.—The disaffected had taken up arms, and had not only formed a union with the Contrabandistes (the smugglers) but had thrown open the prisons and armed the felons. General Dupont had directed his march in the manner in which it is proper to proceed in a friendly country, in order that the inhabitants of those places through which he had to pass, might not be too heavily burdened—but in consequence of the information which his excellency had obtained, he determined to halt, and to concentrate his columns.

"On the 7th June, the French troops arrived at the bridge of Alcolea, seized two pieces of artillery which defended it, drove the enemy to the Lancha, and there took the rest of the artillery. The pursuit after the rebels lasted until half past eleven, and was continued to the gates of Cordova.

"At three in the morning the French troops made their entrance into the town, which had been retarded by the revolt only about two hours and a half.

"Twelve thousand men who refused to acknowledge the lawful authority had assembled at Tudela, and had broken down the bridge. General Lefebvre marched on the 9th towards that point, with a corps of French troops. They passed the Ebro on rafts, with charged bayonets, took possession of the artillery, drove back the rebels from point to point, and completely dispersed them.

"The wretches who had committed all kinds of excesses in Valadolid and its neighborhood, directed their march, 5000 in number, towards the Rio Pisuerga, in order to secure the passage. On the 13th, generals Merle and Lasalle arrived and attacked them. One division began by deploying itself, and 4 pieces of artillery were brought up, by which the rebels were quickly put to flight. They left 5 cannon behind them, besides 2000 muskets, their colors, and all their provisions and ammunition. On the same day the French proceeded on their march towards Valladolid."

BAYONNE, July 10.

The following is the act of guarantee of the new constitution of Naples.

"Napoleon, by the grace of God, emperor of the French, &c. Our dearly beloved brother, prince Joseph Napoleon, king of Naples and Sicily, having submitted to our approbation the constitutional statute, which is to serve for the ground work of political legislation for the kingdom of the two Sicilies, we have approved, and do approve of the said statute, and guarantee its execution on the part of the sovereign and the people of those kingdoms.

NAPOLÉON.

Signed, Given at our imperial and royal palace at Bayonne, June 20, 1808."

BY THIS DAY'S MAIL.

NEW-YORK, September 27.

One day later from England.

A respectable commercial friend has forwarded the editor of the Mercantile Advertiser with a London paper of August 4th, from which the following articles of intelligence are copied:

LONDON, August 1.

Sunday dispatches were received at the Admiralty from Sir Samuel Hood, dated off the island of Moon in the Baltic, on the 17th ult. They state that the admiral had received intelligence from several galleys, under Mecklenburgh colors, that a French force of 30,000 men had assembled at Stralsund for the purpose of invading Sweden, and were in perfect readiness, except that they were obliged to wait the arrival of a great number of boats, which had been collected in the Elbe, and which were to convey them in the first instance to Rugen, where they were to be joined by the Spanish troops.

August 4.

Accounts have been received by government from both extremities of Spain; from Madrid, Collingwood, off Cadiz, dated July 27, by the Dexteros sloop, captain Tomlinson; and from Gijon, by the hands of Sir Thomas Dyer himself, the gentleman who was sent out some time ago to make personal observations on the existing state of affairs in that country, and who reached Plymouth in the Scorpion, captain Stanfield, after the very short passage of three days.

In particular, that he is the bearer of an Official Gazette, the contents of which are highly gratifying. General Caro is described to have attacked Menorca, in the neighborhood of Valencia, on the 25th of June, to have defeated and obliged him to retreat; to have done the same on the 27th; yet still to have left the French in such force, that they, on the 28th, were the first to commence the engagement, in an attempt to take the town of Valencia by storm; but being a 3d time unsuccessful, were ultimately assailed by the united forces of generals Carvello, Llanas and Caro, and completely demolished; there remaining only of the vanquished, a straggling body of 1000 men, out of an army of 12,000 strong. These 1000 men, through the aid of a traitor, were enabled to find their way to, and to join General Frere at St. Clemente; so that they have procured a respite at least (a short one we hope) from the fate of their brethren in Valencia. A Madrid article states, that General Frere's division, which was on its march to reinforce Dupont, was, even after the junction of these 1000 stragglers, unable to proceed any farther than St. Clemente; and farther, that a considerable force under Wrede, sent with the same view of assisting to extricate Dupont, had likewise been completely routed in the very neighborhood of Andujar, by 40,000 Andalusians.

Another piece of intelligence, of a very pleasing aspect, is, that the Catalonians have rendered themselves masters of Fort Montjuic commanding Barcelona, with a considerable loss on their part, but with the absolute destruction of the whole garrison.

One circumstance we have both pride and pleasure in communicating; which is, that the supreme council of Seville has been able to suspend the levying of further contributions, and even to refund out of the money arrived from England the forced and voluntary loans that had been already advanced.

This must give the people of Spain a feeling sense of the interests we take in their concerns; and, when compared with the brutal rapacity exercised by the ruffians who are endeavoring to oppress them, will place the character and principles of the two nations in the most striking point of view. Upon this subject we cannot help mentioning a circumstance which was currently reported at Gijon, before the Scorpion sailed; which is, that the people of Cordova, who, as our readers will recollect, were obliged to make a temporary surrender to the French, did it on condition that no plunder should be permitted. Dupont pledged himself to this term; but on getting possession of the town, gave it up to pillage, and all sorts of excesses, for four hours; which so exasperated the Cordovans, that the whole population rose en masse, and after a most sanguinary conflict, forced him to evacuate the town, and absolutely drove him ten miles into the country, where he was entrenching himself for fear of further attack. Two regiments have actually marched from Gibraltar through the lines of St. Roque, towards Cadiz, near which a great battle was daily expected to be fought.

We cannot conclude this article without stating, that Sir Thomas Dyer, the bearer of the grateful intelligence it contains, was himself present at the battle of Valladolid, the result of which was so variously represented; he is understood to speak with the utmost admiration of the fearless intrepidity with which the Spaniards attacked the French army. Their undisciplined and irregular valor was dreadful. He saw four regiments actually cut to pieces by them.—The rapidity, too, with which the French moved and fired was most formidable.

Alexandria Daily Gazette.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

All Hail, Sister Vermont!!

At length we have received the wished for good news from this State. The embargo party are DOWN—fallen, we trust like Lucifer, never to rise again. The influence of office would not answer. The prostitution of a batch of paper money banks to electioneering purposes would not answer. The infernal trick of imputing to the federalists a murder, committed by a notorious and active democrat failed of success.—The opposers of Executive tyranny, foreign influence, and a tribute-paying Congress have completely triumphed.

The glorious result of the late election in Vermont, we learn to be as follows:—

A Federal Governor.

A Federal Lieutenant Governor.

A Federal Council.

And in the House of Assembly a majority of Federalists.

Of four members of Congress, three Federalists.

Now is the triumph in New-England complete; and the independent yeomanry of the Green Mountains deserve well of their country. (Boston Repertory.)

From the Dublin correspondent, August 6.

The Patriots in Catalonia have not been less indefatigable or distinguished, than in Valencia. A large body of Catalonians, stormed and carried, after sustaining a loss of 6 or 7000 men, Montjuic fort, which had been occupied by a body of French troops—they put the French garrison to the sword.

The loss of the French in the three provinces of Catalonia, Valencia and Arragon, is estimated at 40,000—what we have stated is strictly the substance of the Spanish official accounts.

The editor of the Newburyport Statesman (demo.) has received several letters, some anonymous, and some even from persons who signed their names, threatening him severely for giving his opinions against Bonaparte's conduct towards the Spaniards. (North Amer.)

The dispatches found upon Mr. Young, are said to have been the cause of the determination of the council of Seville to suspend the release of American vessels detained under the French decrees.

Should further difficulties arise from this circumstance exciting an opinion, that we will act against the patriots, we shall have nothing to thank for it but the servility of the administration to the cause of Bonaparte. The American consul would not hazard such a step as he took, by travelling with French dispatches, designed by Murat to bring about an insidious seizure of the Spanish colonies in South America, if he had not thought he was acting in a manner, which agreed with Mr. Jefferson's private policy. Whether any further discoveries were made against those concerned, does not appear; though we know that dispatches were under cover to Mr. Madison, our secretary of state. A more conspicuous or alarming combination of facts could not well be imagined, to check the current of good will towards us, and to irritate the anxious feelings of the patriots, than dispatches of such a nature, from such a cruel monster as Murat, under the cover of our secretary of state, found in the hands of the American consul, who was travelling through their country. Though our rulers have already dashed away so many benefits, which were spontaneously offered by fortune to our enjoyment, they also seem resolved not to conciliate Spain, though it cost no more than the consecration of those principles of liberty once practised upon by ourselves, in which cause Spain afforded us the assistance of her co-operation. Is it probable, that our conduct will be viewed with the same indifference we affect towards that brave and generous people? Nothing is more likely to estrange them from us forages than the slights they may now receive.

Insurgents.—The democrats, alias the French party in this country, stigmatise the patriots of Spain with the appellation of Insurgents. These gentlemen blow hot and cold with the same breath. The patriots of America are eulogised, and very justly, for resisting thirty years ago the tyranny of Britain; and the inhabitants of Spain are loaded with the most infamous epithets for resisting the progress of the monster who is now ravaging their native land, for the purpose of enslaving them forever. Is there any thing like consistency in this? Their attachment to Bonaparte becomes daily more manifest. Their language assumes a more bolder tone—dangerous to liberty—unworthy of free-men—disgraceful to humanity.

DIED, at Williamsburg, August 7th, 1808, in the 22d year of his age, GEORGE MCCARTY, the second son of Mrs. Sarah McCarty of Fairfax county, and grand son of the late venerable George Mason.

Nearly three months had elapsed since the anxious solicitude of Mr. McCarty's friends had perceived that his health was suffering a gradual decline; but the vigor of his constitution kept him active & alert, & he was heedless of the progress of a fatal diarrhoea. On the 31st of July, the disorder suddenly assumed a dangerous and alarming aspect, and in seven days terminated his existence.

Mr. McCarty had been nearly two years a student of William and Mary College, where he had acquired the respect & regard of all who knew him, the friendship and esteem of his instructors, and the love and confidence of his fellow students. Just finishing a course of college studies, he was about to return to the bosom of his family, and to be encircled with the arms of his friends, when he was snatched from their embrace.

If virtue and genius were safe from the ravages of death, Mr. McCarty had lived to adorn the Virginian bar; whether his profession would soon have called him. With a noble and generous soul, which was wont to kindle at a sense of injury or melt at the tale of woe, he was brave and humane, benevolent and unassuming. These estimable qualities were exhibited in an interesting and attractive light by the engaging affability of his deportment, the benignity of his disposition, and the accomplishments of a cultivated and enlightened mind.

With these endowments Mr. McCarty presented to his family and to his country an auspicious futurity. How melancholy to Virginia is the retrospect of a few years! The genius and talents of many of her youthful sons have, within a short space of time, been forever buried in the grave, and the budding laurel of fame lies withering on the tomb! The deceased is an addition to the gloomy, illustrious catalogue of departed worth and merit.
